

CHILD 1: When I grow up, I want to be an astronaut and travel to Mars.

CHILD 2: I want to be a YouTuber.

CHILD 3: When I grow up, I want to be a stunt double.

RAY HARRIPAUL: Digital disruption.

SHAWNE McKEOWN: The gig economy.

RAY HARRIPAUL: Artificial intelligence.

(synthesized voice) Robots.

RAY HARRIPAUL: There's a lot of talk about these things in the media and online but what do they mean for you?

SHAWNE McKEOWN: I'm Sean McKeown.

RAY HARRIPAUL: And I'm Ray Harripaul.

SHAWNE McKEOWN: We are exploring the future of work and changes you can expect to see at your job.

RAY HARRIPAUL: We'll tell you have this massive digital shift to adapt, evolve and thrive.

SHAWNE McKEOWN: We're talking to industry leaders, working professionals and academics about digitalization, climate change, automation and other trends influencing the work force and the skills that will help give you an edge.

RAY HARRIPAUL: We've had some great conversations. Hear interviews with acclaimed social and economic theorist, Mr. Jeremy Rifkin

JEREMY RIFKIN: We are moving to an automated world over the first half of this century.

RAY HARRIPAUL: Toronto tech executive, Claudette McGowan.

CLAUDETTE MCGOWAN: Love learning and create something. And if you keep learning how to create then you'll be fine.

RAY HARRIPAUL: George Brown College President, Anne Sado.

ANNE SADO: We just can't think of a student as a student anymore. They're much more unique and that's why we've started talking about personalization and how do we personalize the education experience?

RAY HARRIPAUL: And many others.

SHAWNE McKEOWN: We're taking a look forward to find out what kinds of new jobs our guests want to see in the future. You don't want to miss our future want ads.

RICHARD ALMONTE: I'd like to see a Workopolis or Indeed ad for a civility coordinator. Or chief generation officer.

CORY ROSS: The medical scribe.

RAY HARRIPUAL: If you're mid-career and thinking of making a shift; if you're taking your first leap into the professional working world; or if you're trying to choose education options that will help you land the job of your dreams, we've got you covered.
