

Articles: Practice 2

Insert the appropriate article: a, an, the, or no article.

Last year, I had the opportunity to visit _____ city-state of Singapore. _____ Singapore is located in Southeast Asia, so _____ climate is hot. Singapore is _____ very modern country, with _____ enviable standard of living. Singapore is _____ multi-cultural country, with four official languages: English, Chinese, Malay, and Tamil. _____ announcements in _____ subway are all in four languages. _____ cuisine of Singapore is well-known. Because of _____ interesting mix of peoples and customs, some of its dishes are _____ mix of Indian, Chinese, Malay, and European styles of cooking. _____ architecture of Singapore is _____ striking mixture of styles, with churches built by _____ Portuguese, next to temples built by _____ Chinese. There are Hindu temples next to mosques and Buddhist temples next to churches. There are tall skyscrapers of glass next to colonial-style villas. Despite _____ fact that Singapore is one of _____ most densely populated cities in _____ world, _____ city is known as _____ Garden City due to _____ number of parks, trees, and even jungle in _____ centre of _____ city!

To _____ north of Singapore is _____ country of Malaysia. Malaysia is also _____ multi-cultural country, with _____ indigenous Malay forming _____ majority. Apart from _____ Malay people, there are large numbers of ethnic Chinese and Indians. _____ capital of Malaysia, Kuala Lumpur, is _____ bustling metropolis with _____ population of several million people. _____ capital city has numerous interesting neighbourhoods reflecting its diversity: Chinatown, Little India, _____ Arab Quarter etc.

_____ food of Malaysia is an interesting mixture of flavours, with many dishes which are influenced by _____ Indians who migrated to Malaysia from _____ state of Tamil Nadu. These dishes contain coconut milk and curry, with local ingredients such as pandan leaf. Malaysian food can be quite spicy, and _____ chili is ubiquitous in Malaysian cuisine.

Malaysia is famous for its wildlife, its untouched jungles and beaches, and is rich in natural resources such as rubber and oil. _____ wildlife of Malaysia includes many species of monkeys, some of which are wandering freely on _____ outskirts of Kuala Lumpur. There are also snakes, some of which are poisonous, so be careful!

_____ countries of Singapore and Malaysia share many similarities, which is not surprising considering they are both former colonies of _____ British, and were both once part of _____ same country. If you are considering _____ visit to either of these locations, you are advised to carefully plan your trip. _____ climate of both of these countries is tropical, so there is never any danger of it being too cold, but there are times of _____ year when it is hotter, or wetter than others. To travel between Singapore and Malaysia, there is _____ train, regular bus service, and a number of airlines make _____ short trip between Singapore and Kuala Lumpur. _____ cost of travel is relatively cheap, in part due to _____ abundance of petroleum in Malaysia.

Articles: Practice 2

ANSWERS

Last year, I had the opportunity to visit the city-state of Singapore. Singapore is located in Southeast Asia, so the climate is hot. Singapore is a very modern country, with an enviable standard of living. Singapore is a multi-cultural country, with four official languages: English, Chinese, Malay, and Tamil. (the) announcements in the subway are all in four languages. The cuisine of Singapore is well-known. Because of an/the interesting mix of peoples and customs, some of its dishes are a mix of Indian, Chinese, Malay, and European styles of cooking. The architecture of Singapore is a striking mixture of styles, with churches built by the Portuguese, next to temples built by the Chinese. There are Hindu temples next to mosques and Buddhist temples next to churches. There are tall skyscrapers of glass next to colonial-style villas. Despite the fact that Singapore is one of the most densely populated cities in the world, the city is known as the Garden City due to the number of parks, trees, and even jungle in the centre of the city!

To the north of Singapore is the country of Malaysia. Malaysia is also a multi-cultural country, with the indigenous Malay forming a/the majority. Apart from the Malay people, there are large numbers of ethnic Chinese and Indians. The capital of Malaysia, Kuala Lumpur, is a bustling metropolis with a population of several million people. The capital city has numerous interesting neighbourhoods reflecting its diversity: Chinatown, Little India, the Arab Quarter etc.

The food of Malaysia is an interesting mixture of flavours, with many dishes which are influenced by the Indians who migrated to Malaysia from the state of Tamil Nadu. These dishes contain coconut milk and curry, with local ingredients such as pandan leaf. Malaysian food can be quite spicy, and (the) chili is ubiquitous in Malaysian cuisine.

Malaysia is famous for its wildlife, its untouched jungles and beaches, and is rich in natural resources such as rubber and oil. The wildlife of Malaysia includes many species of monkeys, some of which are wandering freely on the outskirts of Kuala Lumpur. There are also snakes, some of which are poisonous, so be careful!

The countries of Singapore and Malaysia share many similarities, which is not surprising considering they are both former colonies of the British, and were both once part of the same country. If you are considering a visit to either of these locations, you are advised to carefully plan your trip. The climate of both of these countries is tropical, so there is never any danger of it being too cold, but there are times of the year when it is hotter, or wetter than others. To travel between Singapore and Malaysia, there is a train, regular bus service, and a number of airlines make the short trip between Singapore and Kuala Lumpur. The cost of travel is relatively cheap, in part due to an/the abundance of petroleum in Malaysia.